Damage Calculations in Patent Infringement Cases under English Law

Date & Time: July 8 2021, 16h00 -17h00 BST / 15h00-16h00 CEST

What the Event is About:

In the United Kingdom, the calculation of damages is undertaken after patent infringement has been demonstrated. The patentee can choose between damage awards or account of profits. Damage awards can be described as a monetary compensation that seeks to put the injured party in the same position as if infringement had not happened (the status quo ante). Account of profits again assess the infringer's profits that can be associated with the infringed patent. In that respect a patentee is allowed limited access to the infringer's financial statements. In this webinar we discuss the key tenets of damage calculations in patent infringement cases, assess opportunities and limitations under the current law and offer an outlook on potential developments in a Post Brexit era.
